

Connecting Researchers to Resources around them

AfriSciANet is setup with the aim of developing a database for research equipment that is available in Africa for access or use by researchers. There exist relevant resources and research facilities in Africa that could be used for quality research but most of these is not easily accessible. Most of the facilities are managed by qualified and experienced staffs that support researchers to get good results. It is also true that some researchers do not have access to good facilities for research; even when what they need is not far from them. AfriSciANet is therefore a one stop shop for researchers and other high tech service users. The platform will help connect researchers of common interest and it will give graduate students an idea of capabilities that exist in their research area.
